From The Tribune's European Bureau Copyright, 1922, New York Tribune, Inc. LONDON, Aug. 27.—The King and LONDON, Aug. 27.—The King and Queen, before joining their court at Balmoral Castle, have been staying at Moy Hall, Inverness, where they enjoyed excellent sport on the grouse moors. Their party shot more than 600 brace on the opening day. The Queen set a record by accompanying the King on this visit to The Mackintosh and Mrs. Mackintosh, as no British queen ever has stayed at a place as far North as the historic seat of Moy.

While the royal couple is vacationing in Scotland parties are being held at Buckingham Palace next Thursday for wounded soldiers and sailors, there being about 8,500 in London hospitals. The Dowager Queen and Princess Mary will provide tea. The gentlemen of the household have received the right of entertaining until the end of September.

contertaining until the end of September.

Princess Mary has not been in Scotland thus far, being the guest of the Marquess of Londonderry at Wyryard Park and visiting the Stockton races.

London continues to receive frequent visits from various members of society, many of them from the Continent and Scotland. This week Sir John and Lady Ware have been here on their way to Craigall, Perthshire, where they intend to spend the early fall.

Lady Litchfield, daughter of the late Theodore P. Shonts, has leased Clair Castle from Lord Atholl for a few months and is entertaining a large party of visitors. Viscount and Viscounts Astor with their children also have left London, going to Jura Island, West Scotland, where Lord Astor has an estate.

Sir John and Lady Lavery are paying a round of visits in the North instead of going to the Continent. Mrs. Arthur James arrived in London this week from Marienbad, where she has been taking the cure, and left almost immediately for Scotland. Lady Alastair and child are now visiting the Dowager Duehess of Roxburgh at Broxmouth Park, near Dunbar. Lord and Lady Lee of Farcham are cruising on the Mediterranean. The Hon. Mrs. Chetwynd has taken a house at Minehad and there is entertaining her sister and brother-in-law.

Then he got out his friendship book to look over the list of the names of the folks who used to do the "fixin"; for his vacation last summer and in years gone by. You can guess what the book showed from the ejaculation to which he gave vent as he ran his eye down the list:

"Gosh an' geewhilikins!" said he, "they's 3,000 of 'em that's forgot all about me this year. What do ya know 'bout that! Guess I better write to 'em 'n'tell 'em I'm still alive."

And he did. This is what he wrote:

Lord Northcliffe's own program as to the future of "The Times" is in dispute. It is said by some of his friends that at one period he contemplated endowing the paper as an independent organ under trust; that his attitude changed in later years and that he meant to dominate the paper after his death by the provisions of the will.

The contest over the estate apparently will hinge on whether Lord Northcliffe was of sound mind when his second will was executed, shortly before his death. By the terms of this document Lady Northcliffe is the sole executrix. There are four codicils to the earlier testament, the last made on April 27, 1922.

The caveats will have the effect of preventing administration of the estate pending hearing. The summons which has been issued puts the whole problem up to Chancery, and not until one of the wills is admitted to probate will the wishes of Lord Northcliffe become officially known.

The fate of "The Times" is the subject of a three-column article in to-day's "Observer," written by J. L. Garvin, who points out that aside from Sir John Ellerman and Lord Rothermere, who are obvious candidates for ownership, there are Sir William Berry, who is handling Lloyd George's forthcoming war memoirs; Lord Beaverbrook, proprietor of "The Daily Express," and Sir Mackay Edgar, the Anglo-Canadian millionaire.

Lord Rothermere is the elder brother of Northcliffe, and in active charge of the Northcliffe publications, If Lloyd Northcliffe's shares in "The Times" should be thrown on the open market the struggle for control might precipitate a contest similar to that in 1908, when the late Arthur Pearson barely missed capturing the controlling interest.
